

Cover image © Shutterstock.com

Kendall Hunt
publishing company

www.kendallhunt.com

Send all inquiries to:

4050 Westmark Drive

Dubuque, IA 52004-1840

Copyright © 2021 by Kendall Hunt Publishing Company

ISBN: 978-1-7924-3210-1

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, without the prior written permission of the copyright owner.

Published in the United States of America

Dedications

To our children

Contents

List of Tables	ix
List of Figures	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Contributors	xv
1. Responding to the Call for Social Justice	1
Farrah Gafford Cambrice
Part I Prioritizing Black and Brown Health
2. Black Women’s Mental Health and COVID-19	9
Claire Norris, Tamika C. Baldwin-Clark, Tiffany D. Thomas, and Farrah G. Cambrice
3. African American Men’s Health Disparities	23
Jerry Watson, Yarneccia D. Dyson, Shonda K. Lawrence, and Malik Cooper
4. Interview: Black Women’s Reproductive Health and Controversies	35
Farrah G. Cambrice
Part II The Societal Punishment of Black and Brown Bodies
5. Police Brutality, African American Men, and Social Justice: An Ideological Challenge	43
Shonda K. Lawrence, Jerry Watson, and Malik Cooper
6. Wrongful Convictions: Race and Exoneration in the Criminal Justice System	57
William T. Hoston and Farrah G. Cambrice

7. Debate: Does “Black and Brown Forgiveness” Hinder the Fight for Racial and Ethnic Justice? 69
Affirmative, James Jones III
Negative, Michael Royster

Part III Social Justice and Education

8. Interview: Do Charter Schools Represent a Viable Alternative to Low Performing Schools with a Majority Black and Brown Student Body? 87
Tabitha S.M. Morton and Farrah G. Cambrice
9. Religiosity, Prosocial Values, and Future Expectations in High-Achieving Urban African American Adolescents 95
Antanious White and Michael Cunningham
10. Merging Pedagogy with Social Justice: An Examination of Classroom Instruction, Civic Engagement Approaches, and Challenging Social Inequality at a Private Historically Black College 117
Roshunda Harris-Allen and Keyonte Jackson

Part IV Social Justice Issues in Urban Spaces: Past and Present

11. Examining Interracial Civil Rights Activism in 1950s Pottstown, Pennsylvania 131
Matthew G. Washington
12. Place Dynamics of African American Populations in the Houston Metropolitan Region 143
Noel M. Estwick, Bakama BakamaNume, Darrel L. McDonald, and William Turner
13. Debate: Is Gentrification a Detriment to Predominately Black and Latinx Communities? 159
Affirmative, Asheli Atkins
Negative, Andreanecia M. Morris

Part V Social Justice in Action

14.	New Orleans Youth Alliance	173
	Interview with Executive Director, Dr. Rashida Govan
15.	National Black Women’s Justice Institute	179
	Interview with Executive Director, Dr. Sydney McKinney
16.	HBCU Students Fighting for the Right to Vote	183
	Maia A. Young
	About the Editors	187
	Index	189

List of Figures

Figure 9.1: Hypothesized Model.

Figure 9.2: Interaction of Positive Youth Experiences (PYE) and Religiosity with Future Expectations as an Outcome.

Figure 9.3: Interaction of Religiosity and Prosocial Values with Future Expectations as an Outcome.

Figure 10.1: Civic Engagement Course Development Model.

Figure 10.2: SJRP Civic Engagement, Education, and Learning Model.

Figure 12.1: Typical Residences in Third Ward, also Pejoratively Known as “Shotgun Houses.”

Figure 12.2: Building at Riverside General Hospital, Formerly Known as the Houston Negro Hospital.

Figure 12.3: The African American Library, Former Home of The Edgar M. Gregory School.

Figure 12.4: Study Area—88 Super Neighborhoods of Houston, Texas.

Figure 12.5: African American Population and Median Income.

Figure 12.6: African American Population and Distance from Downtown.

Figure 12.7: Population Change in Neighborhoods among African Americans from 2010 to 2014.

Figure 12.8: Regression Showing Population Distribution, Distance, Median Income, and Education.

Acknowledgments

The completion of this book would not be possible without the support and contributions of those in our immediate professional circles, households, and members of our campus community. Also, the authors who contributed their time, insights, and scholarship played an important role in bringing this book to fruition. Your work brings light to an often-neglected feature of improving conditions in our communities—ensuring social justice.

We want to recognize the students who conducted research and contributed to this book in any way. Your input contributes to our awareness and understanding of social justice issues and assures us that our future is secure with you as leaders.

Thank you to Prairie View A&M University’s Mellon Center for Faculty Excellence for helping to support this project [Mellon Grant Number: 1906-06895].

Last, we are grateful and sincerely thank the team at Kendall Hunt Publishing Company for their assistance in making this project a reality. Thank you to Ray Wood, Kathleen Ackerson, Bev Kraus, and Samantha Lessei for their editorial guidance and expertise.

Farrah Gafford Cambrice

I would like to thank a host of family, friends, students, and colleagues who served as a never-ending source of positive energy and encouragement throughout this project. To Graham, Bailey, Gilbert, Zondra, Cara, Gillian, Christine, Cameron, Kristina, and Tai, thank you for being my front row. Your love, support, and encouragement are unrivaled.

William T. Hoston

All praise to my Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. With Him, all things are possible. He has provided me with the four most influential women in my life, the late Mildred Hoston, the late Bertha-Mae Mitchell, Thelma C. Owens, and Janet Smith. I am a product of their hard work and sacrifice. In the words of Abraham Lincoln, “All that I am, or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother[s].”

I want to thank my beautiful wife, Cecilia Hoston. I love you. You gave my life such love, happiness, and joy—the wind beneath my wings. My wife and my son, William T. Hoston Jr., are my world. I want to thank them for giving my life more balance and purpose. To my son, Daddy loves you.

To you whom I have not named, please know that even though you are not named in this book, I deeply appreciate what you have contributed to my life. Your contributions have helped this “Black boy fly.”

Marco Robinson

My faith in Christ has sustained me through this publication process and life. All praise is due to the Most High! This journey is possible because of the sacrifices of my late grandparents and mother, Albert Lipford, Mary Alice Lipford, and Annette Dunbar. The genuine love and provision you imparted to me is unmatched. I first learned to care about “community” from you all. Tracy Robinson, my wife, and the center of my world, thank you for your support, inspiration, and directing me to greatness. Our nucleus, our kids, Jay, Leah, and Kya, are the driving forces behind our every achievement. I have to recognize the leaders of our editorial team, Drs. Cambrice and Hoston. Your scholarship and presence in higher education is transforming the academy. Last, DelJuan Robinson, my only living brother, your cheering me on, and encouragement, means more than you know! Marchello and Jerrell, this one is for you!

As a developmental psychologist, Dr. Cunningham has a program of research that focuses on racial, ethnic, psychosocial, and socioeconomic processes that affect psychological well-being, adjustment to chronic stressful events, and academic achievement among African American adolescents and their families.

Yarneckia D. Dyson, Ph.D., M.S.W., is an equity-minded thought leader committed to inclusive excellence and social justice. As a Social and Behavioral Scientist, Dr. Dyson engages in health disparities research that focuses on reducing and alleviating negative health outcomes by empowering marginalized communities through Implementation Science. She currently serves as an Assistant Professor of Social Work at The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, where she also teaches in the Joint Master of Social Work Program and served on the Development Committee for the newly formed Joint Ph.D. Program with North Carolina A&T State University. Dr. Dyson grounds her teaching, scholarship, and research in empowerment-based theories and frameworks. Dr. Dyson is a Black Feminist Scholar who embodies collectivism and supporting others.

Noel M. Estwick, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Agriculture, Nutrition and Human Ecology, Prairie View A&M University. He holds a Ph.D. in Urban Planning and Environmental Policy from Texas Southern University. Dr. Estwick's research interests include improving the emergency management process, especially among underserved populations and persons with functional and access needs. In 2017, he participated in the United States Department of Agriculture National Institute of Food and Agriculture (USDA/NIFA) Division of Family and Consumer Sciences Visiting Scholar Program. The program advances collaboration between NIFA and its Land-Grant University (LGU) partners.

Roshunda Harris-Allen, Ed.D., is an Assistant Professor of Education, Director of Professional Programs, and a grantee for the Institute for the Study of Modern-Day Slavery at Tougaloo College located in Tougaloo, Mississippi. While at Tougaloo College, Dr. Allen participates in analyzing, designing, producing, and teaching instructional materials from approved curricula; motivates students to actively participate in all aspects of the educational process; and oversee all professional studies activities. She also serves as an educational consultant for various private and public organizations. Dr. Allen has worked in the field of education since 1999 and has an extensive background in PreK-16 education.

Keyonte Jackson, currently resides in Byram, Mississippi. She earned a Bachelor of Arts in Child Development degree on May 7, 2017. She is currently enrolled in the Master of Arts in Child Development program at The Historic Tougaloo College. Keyonte Jackson is currently a first grade teacher at Lester Elementary School within the Jackson Public School District. At Lester Elementary School, she serves on the Team Leadership committee, and she's also a sponsor for the Southern Jewels. Ms. Jackson is a strong believer in creating a positive learning environment in which respect for others is fundamental in promoting intellectual diversity.

James Thomas Jones III, Ph.D., currently serves as an Associate Professor of African American Studies at Prairie View A&M University. In his role at PVAMU, Dr. Jones has influenced thousands of students to phenomenal success that resulted in his being honored as Male Professor of the Year on several occasions. In addition to his in-class prowess, Dr. Jones has found time to produce several works ranging from an ethnographic study of his travels to Ghana, the Black Panther Party for Self-Defense, and a creative piece titled, Foolish Floyd: The Life and Times of an African-American Contrarian. As an African-Americanist, Dr. Jones specializes in the modern era, Black Intellectual History, Civil Rights, Black Power, Labor, and Black Popular Culture.

Shonda K. Lawrence, Ph.D., is an Associate Professor in Social Work and currently serves as the Bachelor of Social Work Program Director at Clark Atlanta University. Her research interests include child welfare, the impact of parental incarceration on children and families, and African American fatherhood. She teaches courses in research, social welfare policy, theory, and cultural diversity. Dr. Lawrence has also received foundation, state, and federal funding to conduct research. She serves as a Commissioner on the Membership and Professional Development Commission (CMPD) and Accreditation/Reaffirmation Site Visitor for the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE).

Darrel L. McDonald, Ph.D., C.P.M., G.I.S.P., received his undergraduate and initial graduate degrees from Chadron State College located in Northwest Nebraska. He holds a Ph.D. in Biogeography from Texas A&M University. He has taught Geography at Stephen F. Austin State University since 1990, serving as coordinator of the Geography program from 1995–2004. From 2005–2010, McDonald served as the Assistant Director of Education and Training for the Columbia Regional Geospatial Service Center System (Columbia Center). Currently, McDonald is the Coordinator of Geography, Assistant Director of the Certified Public Manager Program, and affiliated with the Center for Regional Heritage Research.

Andreanecia M. Morris, serves as the Executive Director for HousingNOLA, a 10-year partnership between the community leaders, and dozens of public, private, and nonprofit organizations working to solve New Orleans' affordable housing crisis. HousingNOLA's mission is to provide a road map to maximize scarce government resources, increase nontraditional resources, and assist the private sector in making strategic and equitable choices. Prior to her role as Executive Director, Morris spearheaded the development of the HousingNOLA 10-year Strategy and Implementation Plan. The plan calls for 33,600 new affordable housing opportunities by 2025.

Tabitha S. M. Morton, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Prairie View A&M University. She earned her Ph.D. in Political Science from Texas A&M University with concentrations in public administration, public policy, and race, ethnic, and gender politics. Dr. Morton's work is based on evaluating and creating policies, procedures, and recommendations on how to rectify disparities on issues that affect Black and Brown communities. A significant portion of her research uses theories from public administration in order to address the racial disparities between White students and Black and Brown students in public education.

Claire M. Norris, Ph.D., is the Associate Vice President for Diversity, Inclusion, and Effectiveness at the University of Louisiana System. Dr. Norris's research interests include race, social support, social networks, and mental health.

Michael D. Royster, Ph.D., has been a part of the Prairie View A&M University faculty since 2009 and has been a professional educator since 1993 in a variety of settings, including secondary level, community colleges, a graduate-level Seminary, and prisons. He has degrees from Texas Southern University, Prairie View A&M University, Southern Methodist University, and Emory University. Dr. Royster's teaching and research interests are broad but primarily focuses on the following areas: religious life in the African Diaspora, social movements, peace and justice studies, and race, ethnicity, and nationalism.

Tiffany D. Thomas, Ph.D., was in nonprofit executive management for over 15 years working for a variety of agencies focused on education, health care, and direct services before transitioning to higher education at Prairie View A&M University. She completed her undergraduate studies at Sam Houston State University and received her Masters of Community Development from Prairie View A&M University and completed professional programs at Indiana University and Yale. Dr. Thomas teaches Introduction to Community Development, Community Research, Community Development Politics, Campaigns, and Major Gifts in the Masters of Community Development program at Prairie View A&M University—Northwest Campus.

William Turner, Ph.D., has focused his career on demographic and ethnographic studies and programmatic interventions among people of color in the Appalachian Region. Among the first to combine interests in the fields of African American and Appalachian Studies, Dr. Turner has published extensively in national newspapers, refereed academic journals, and books on the Black experience in Appalachia. He co-edited the path-breaking textbook, Blacks in Appalachia and thematic essays on Black Appalachians in the Encyclopedia of Southern Culture, and the Encyclopedia of Appalachia.

Matthew G. Washington, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor in the Division of Social Work, Behavioral and Political Sciences at Prairie View A&M University. He obtained his Ph.D. in History from Morgan State University in Baltimore, Maryland; his M.A. in History from West Chester University of Pennsylvania (West Chester, Pennsylvania); and his B.A. in Sociology with a History minor from Kutztown University of Pennsylvania (Kutztown, Pennsylvania). Dr. Washington is a historian of the 20th-century struggle for African American civil rights and social justice work in the North.

Jerry Watson, Ph.D., M.S.W., is currently an Assistant Professor and Coordinator of the Bachelors of Social Work program at the University of Memphis. Dr. Watson is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker and received his M.S.W. degree from the University of Illinois at Chicago; M.B.A. from Dominican University in River Forest, Illinois, and Ph.D. in Higher Education from Jackson State University. His research focus is diverse, ranging from offender re-entry, community violence interruption and prevention, and African American Men's health disparities to cultural and linguistic competency.

Antanious White, is a fifth-year doctoral candidate in the Sociology track of the City, Culture, Community (CCC) program at Tulane University (expected, '21). He is a fellow of the Louisiana Board of Regents/Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) Doctoral Fellowship and has received the Tulane Presidential Fellow award. He earned his Bachelor of Arts in Sociology from Xavier University of Louisiana ('15). Mr. White has a background in education, having taught at secondary and collegiate levels. His research interests focus on the educational achievement of Black youth, positive youth development, Black masculinity, and resiliency.

Maia A. Young, a recent graduate of Prairie View A&M University, is a native of Missouri City, Texas. At Prairie View, she studied both Political Science and Legal Studies. Attending a Historically Black University in Texas allowed Ms. Young to realize her purpose and passion in life, which is fighting for social, racial, and economic justice and empowerment for Black Americans. Throughout her college career, she focused on student voting rights, and this was shown in her assistance with student-led voting marches (e.g., The Hill Takes The Vote and March to the Polls), but also with the numerous voter registration drives hosted for students and citizens of Prairie View, Texas. Ms. Young represents what it means to be “young, gifted, and Black.”

